

Dr Chris Millora is BALID Chair (since 2021) and Assistant Professor (Lecturer) in Educational Studies at Goldsmiths, University of London. Chris is interested on the intersection of informal learning and young people's social action, volunteering and social movements. He is leading the Leverhulme Trust Early Career Fellowship-funded research project (2022-2024), Literacies of Dissent: learning, youth activism and social change, a youth-led participatory action research project on the literacies and learning dimension of youth social movements in the Philippines and Chile. Chris worked as Senior Research Associate on a number of projects with the UNESCO Chair in Adult Literacy and Learning for Social Transformation at the University of East Anglia where he also completed his PhD in Education and Development in 2021. Chris has an MA in Lifelong Learning Policy and Management from the Institute of Education, University College London and the Danish School of Education in Copenhagen, Denmark. Chris divides his time between the UK and his home country, the Philippines where conducts most of his research.
